Students collect clothing donations for mission trip

A group of Saint Luke’s College students are preparing for their October mission trip to Elk Horn City, Kentucky. They are collecting new/gently used clothes and children’s book to take with them.

“We are going to an area in the Appalachia’s that have been hit hard by poverty and do not have readily available access to healthcare. We will be staying at The Freeda Harris Baptist Center and they have requested that we bring along clothing items to help restock their clothing closet,” said Becky Everett, a student member of the group.

Needed donations include winter clothing for adults and children: new socks and underwear, new/gently used: jeans, slacks/khakis, long sleeve shirts, sweat shirts/pants, sweaters, coats/jackets, gloves, hats, scarves, ear muffs, and shoes/boots.

In addition to clothes, they are collecting new or gently used books to give the children as prizes for activities they are planning.
